Background	Lysn is a 100% Australian owned company founded and based in Brisbane, Australia. It was founded by Jonathan King and David Chung in 2017. Jonathan is an Australian trained medical doctor. After working in various hospitals in rural communities around Australia, Jonathan came to realise that there is a significant deficiency in healthcare in rural regions. In particular, he saw that people in rural areas struggled to access allied health services. In many cases, people

have to fly to another town or city, or drive for hours to access allied health services which people in metropolitan areas can access easily and cheaply.

Jonathan saw a problem which could be solved with technology. To achieve his vision, he teamed up with his good friend David, a tech-obsessed commercial solicitor in Queensland, to develop and launch Lysn, a company dedicated to changing healthcare in Australia.

Jonathan and David have each, in their own lives, seen the effects of mental illness on others. They both recognise that, despite advances in medical knowledge, mental health still suffers from a stigma in Australia. They are both passionate about advancing the mental health movement in Australia, and that is why the first service offered by Lysn is in the area of psychology.

Lysn has plans to expand its services to other allied health specialties in 2017.
